BAKESHOP

Original Recipe

 Easy

Hi Everyone! I'm so pleased to be back here with a fun and easy project that is absolutely perfect for the beginner quilter (or for those who need to whip up a quick-yet-pretty gift). The layout of this quilt is very simple and works with many pre-cuts - fat quarters, layer cakes, or charm packs. The trick is blending the fabrics from two different lines. I made this one with my daughter and it makes a great kids' sewing project.

Ingredients:

5 to 6 charm packs (choose lines that have lots of pink in different shades) - I used Posy by Aneela Hoey & Twenty Three by Eric and Julie Comstock.

3/8 yard Bella Solids for binding

3 2/3 yards Bella Solids for backing

Instructions:

From your charm packs, select fabrics with pink or white hues. Try mixing warm and cool tones, as I did. I even used a bit of orange. The results are actually very pretty. Because you will be creating a quilt from dark to light, ensure that you have a nice even mix of both, along with a good amount of mid-range pink (or whichever colour you have chosen). Say a mixture of five or six darker pinks/reds/oranges, five or six whites (with a touch of pink), and the rest in mid-range pinks.

Lay the charm squares on the floor and work out your desired design, ensuring that you gently blend the colours from dark to light. Take a photo of this design to help ensure you get it right later on.

Starting in the bottom right hand corner, work backwards along the quilt, right to left, collecting your squares into a pile. This will make it much easier when you come to sewing the quilt top. Plus it looks pretty too...

Begin assembling your quilt in rows of eight, with a 1/4" seam allowance for each seam.

Attach the strips together, either as you go or all at the end, your preference.

I gave my quilt top a good iron before sandwiching and quilting the top (very basic quilting - I am still very much a beginner quilter!). Bind and quilt as desired. I used a white binding, but soft pink would look lovely too... Didn't I tell you it was easy?!

Yield:

One small 40' by 60' single quilt for a pink-mad girl. This would be a fun (and even easier) project using charm squares if you have enough pinks and whites - no cutting required! Use fat quarters or layer cakes to make a larger version, and you can easily recreate this project using any colour you wish!
