

1. Desk

Make your primary desk work overtime by including a bank of wall cabinets. The mix of open and closed spaces allows you to organize paperwork behind doors while putting pretty stationery and journals in plain sight.

the room everyone wants

We designed the ultimate "drop zone" in our 2007 Portland show home, a catchall room for paying bills, crafting, doing laundry, washing the dog, and so much more.

5. Pinup boards

A pair of small corkboards provides a pretty place to hang favorite cards, invitations, or to-do lists. Stack three cake stands for a tier of storage to hold craft or office supplies. Anything you get off the work surface instantly expands your available counter space.

6. New containers ...

Craft supplies are sorted in a series of lidded glass jars. Find endless supplies to store your small stuff at containerstore.com or stacksandstacks.com.

7. ... and old

An old caddy filled with vintage cups becomes a handy place to store pencils, scissors, and anything else you want to keep upright. ☉

A lesson in space: Despite the four passageways and a snaking shape, this small room packs purpose into every nook and cranny. The triangle next to the dryer? It became a broom closet. The large peninsula breaks up the galley and creates a surface for crafting.
